Ron Macinnis

Ron Macinnis has more than 25 years of experience promoting dialogue and partnerships amongst key stakeholders in the HIV response globally. He has also worked to strengthen health systems and improve community engagement to successfully advocate for, develop, adopt, and implement HIV policies and provide high-quality services.

As Deputy Director of the USAID-funded Health Policy Project (2010-2015), Ron provided oversight of the HIV portfolio, working with USAID, Office of the Global AIDS Coordinator (OGAC), UNAIDS, the Global Fund, and the US Centers for Disease Control (CDC) at global and country levels to synergize policy analysis and reform efforts. Ron's work supporting local civil society organization capacity to lead and deliver HIV and human rights programs have resulted in several recognition awards by civil society networks and organizations around the world.

Currently, as Technical Director of HIV and Health Systems at Palladium International, Ron supports a diverse and complex portfolio of activities around the world. He previously worked for USAID Office of HIV and AIDS, Internews, and the International AIDS Society. Ron has been living with HIV since 1994. Ron joined the ICASO board in 2020 and is currently the Chair.
